Cyanide (\u0026 Cyanide Antidotes) - Cyanide (\u0026 Cyanide Antidotes) 20 minutes - Clinical Toxicology video for Healthcare, Science students.

Intro

"Cyanide" is derived from kyanos Greek dark blue since it was discovered in the pigment Prussian Blue

Cyanide is produced when nitrogen-containing materials burn, such as in building fires

Several plant foods contain cyanogenic glycosides, which can release small amounts of cyanide

CN inhibits cytochrome C oxidase, complex IV in the mitochondrial electron transport chain

CN binds to Fe in cytochrome a and cytochrome a₃ inhibiting electron transport

Laboratory findings in CN poisoning: Serum tests anion gap metabolic acidosis lactate in severe cases

Some sources make too big a deal about skin color with cyanide poisoning

Some sources make too big a deal about cyanide having a bitter almond odor

Cyanide causes signs and symptoms of hypoxia, with high doses causing loss of consciousness in seconds

Traditional "cyanide antidote kits" contain nitrites and sodium thiosulfate

Nitrites oxidize hemoglobin to methemoglobin, providing Fe³⁺ for an alternate "cyanide sink"

Rhodanese detoxifies cyanide (CN) to thiocyanate (SCN) using thiosulfate as a sulfur donor

Cyanide Antidote Kit dosing

Hydroxocobalamin is easier to administer (single drug) and has a more favorable side effects profile

Hydroxocobalamin causes temporary reddening of the skin / body fluids
